

It has been five years since Aporia first rolled off the press. Originally its mission was to "encourage students to sharpen writing skills, promote more interaction among philosophy majors, and to provide a broader ground for discussion of philosophical issues" at Brigham Young University. The current Aporia staff remains committed to this goal. However, unlike previous years, this year we have made Aporia something more than an "in-house" venture. Instead of choosing essays simply from the David H. Yarn Essay Contest submissions, as in former years, we solicited papers from other undergraduate philosophy departments throughout the country. Of the submissions we received we chose the best essay and published it with the winners of the David H. Yarn Essay Contest. It is our sincere hope that in the future we will be able to include more of the submissions we receive from outside of our own department. In any case, we remain committed to publishing quality work produced by philosophy undergraduates.

The Aporia staff would like to thank all those who support this journal. Special thanks go to Linda Hunter Adams and Dr. K. Codell Carter for all their help and support. We should also note that the David H. Yarn fund supplies Aporia with a great deal of its financial support. Those wishing to contribute to the fund may contact the BYU Philosophy Department.

Aporia
3196 JKHB
Philosophy Department
Brigham Young University
Provo, UT 84602

Questions should be directed to the Philosophy Department at (801) 378-2721.

Editor
Mark Olsen

Editorial Staff
David Jensen
Benjamin Wallace
Jennifer Wallace
David Engler
Melinda Muse

Aporia

A Student Journal of Philosophy

Brigham Young University

1995

Bonjour on Coherentism: A Critical Analysis of "The Coherence Theory of Empirical Knowledge"

Jan-Erik Jones

1

Socratic Ignorance and the Claim that Virtue Is Knowledge

David Jensen

13

Aristotle's Induction: Binding the Universal to the Particular

Benjamin Huff

27

Tri-partite Friendship in Plato's Lysis

Amy Coplan

37

© 1995, Aporia.