APORIA is published twice yearly by the Department of Philosophy of Brigham Young University and is dedicated to recognizing exemplary philosophical work at the undergraduate level. The winter issue each year includes the winning essays of the annual David H. Yarn Philosophical Essay Competition (open to BYU undergraduates) along with other outstanding philosophical essays submitted from undergraduate philosophers around the world. The winners of the Yarn Competition are selected by a faculty committee independent of the student editors and staff, who make all other publishing decisions. The fall issue consists of papers selected by the editorial staff and is open to all undergraduate students, both at BYU and elsewhere.

The APORIA staff is especially grateful to those who support and make possible this journal. Special thanks go to Professor K. Codell Carter, chair of the Department of Philosophy, for his encouragement and assistance, and to Linda Hunter Adams of the Humanities Publications Center. APORIA is funded by a generous contribution from the David H. Yarn Endowment. Those wishing to contribute to this fund may do so by contacting the BYU Department of Philosophy.

Submission information may be found at the back of this journal. All inquiries should be sent to aporia@byu.edu or to:
